

Managing pressure in work and life for international scientists

GB280

The training is for international scientists who have to face a variety of challenges: high expectations, career uncertainty and a new social and cultural environment.

The trainig teaches effective stress management methods and offers the opportunity to connect with other scientists in the same situation.

The following topics are covered:

- Stress Awareness
- Cognitive Coping Strategies
- Behavioral Coping Strategies
- Regeneration
- Social Support and Communication
- Career Resilience

The event takes place at FTU

Duration: 1 day
