English for Laboratory Technicians - Englisch für Labormitarbeitende

One-day workshop

As universities become increasingly international, laboratory technicians are required to communicate with foreign students and researchers in English. Many only have "rusty" school English and lack confidence when speaking or writing English. This workshop is designed for lab staff with a low to medium level of school English who want to refresh their language skills. Working in a relaxed atmosphere, we will look at specialist vocabulary and practise basic oral and written situations needed for everyday working life. In addition, you will leave the course with a list of internet resources, a glossary and tips that will help you to communicate more effectively in English in your job.

The following topics will be covered:

- Describing your work and your role
- Building lab-specific vocabulary
- Explaining rules and safety regulations
- Giving a guided tour of the lab
- Dealing with frequently asked questions
- Writing brief emails to students and suppliers
- Reading English-language instructions.

Start of training: 09:00 a.m. End of training: 04:30 p.m.
